

A Broken Sonnet

The falcon hawk
circles the sky
ever wider rings
distancing himself
from the land below.

Our wedding fingers
trace broken circles
in the dust
encircling the pane.

We plant perennials
hoping we will outlast their bloom.

Will the fierce hawk rule the day or will the dove have greater sway?

—Kathy Tyler