

Contributors

Bukola Akinbogun

Having worked with children and young adults over some time, Bukola is an advocate for teen safety and empowerment. She is really interested in public discourse related to struggles against the faults of the society and human escape from the ill treatment from government. With a Bachelor of Technology degree, she is currently exploring the thin line between technology and communication as a student of Library and Information Science at Dalhousie University.

Katie Bowers

Before coming to Dalhousie to take her Masters in Library and Information Studies, Katie spent four years at Mount Saint Vincent University studying English Literature, with a particular interest in children's literature and contemporary fiction. Katie is passionate about youth library services and an advocate for youth literacy and hopes to work in this field once she graduates. In her spare time, Katie can be found knitting, attempting to cook, or pretending she still belongs in the teen section of the library.

Tess Grynoch

If you looked her up online, you would find that she is a Masters student in the Library and Information Studies program at Dalhousie University, candidate 2016. Prior to her move to Halifax, she could be seen cataloguing at the University of Alberta Libraries. She has a Bachelor of Science from the University of Alberta and has spent a semester studying at the University of Canterbury in Christchurch, New Zealand. Whenever she travels into the unknown, there is always a book traveling with her.

Alanna McLellan

Originally from Vancouver, Alanna graduated with an undergraduate degree in History from Simon Fraser University, and attended field school at Charles University in Prague. Before travelling east to study for her Masters of Library and Information Studies at Dalhousie University, Alanna enjoyed volunteering at school libraries and working at the local public library. In her spare time, she enjoys travelling, keeping up with popular culture and sports, and is often caught up in a good book with a cup of tea in hand.

Amy Sutherland

Due to her interests in mysteries and dystopian fiction, Amy is always wary of who's watching her. In between watching Pretty Little

Liars and reading Divergent, Amy is studying for her Masters of Library and Information Studies at Dalhousie University. Having spent four years studying English at St. Thomas University, she enjoys analyzing the corrupt governments and dysfunctional nature of dystopian literature. In the future, Amy hopes to become a public librarian, working especially with children and youth.