

The Potter

The potter sits at her wheel the clay lifeless
her hands hum
the clay becomes her nails and her fingers turn brown with the effort

First the clay is a heart, then a goblet
stretched and whirred
hand made by a wheel
and friction and flesh
and blood and imagination

— donalee Moulton-Barrett